This course covers the entire curriculum of the University of Tennessee's two-year course series. To qualify to take the official University of Tennessee certification examination after completion of the course, the participant must submit case studies and complete a one-week externship. The exam will also be held in Europe.

Modern physical therapy and rehabilitation techniques have become integral parts of veterinary practice.

Advantages of using these innovative techniques:

- Much faster postoperative rehabilitation
- Effective conservative treatment of orthopedic and neurological diseases
- Effective pain management
- Management of sport dogs and working dogs
- Improved customer satisfaction

Special features of this course:

- Effective knowledge transfer in a compact seminar instead of a two-year program
- Extensive hands-on training
- Small group sizes for effective theoretical and practical learning
- Evidence-based medicine approach
- Provides access to the latest research findings
